

A photograph of a triangular, cream-colored paper envelope, likely a historical document. The envelope is oriented with its apex pointing downwards. In the center of the envelope's face is a circular wax seal, which is embossed with a coat of arms. The coat of arms features a crown at the top, flanked by two lions. The envelope is placed on a light-colored, textured surface. At the top left corner, a portion of a handwritten letter in black ink is visible, showing the word "Vimmofptin" in a cursive script. The envelope's flap is folded over the top, and a small, irregular tear or mark is visible on the flap near the seal.
